Dr. Magnes and the Peace of Palestine

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath

A most serious controversy has just burst forth from the cloistered walls of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, a controversy that has crystallized those two divergent and long conflicting theories of Zionism—the national or political and the cultural or spiritual attitude toward the Jewish homeland in Zion. Standing on the firm foundation of the latter interpretation of Zionism (laid down so logically and with so much inspiration by Achad Ha Am), Dr. Magnes at the opening of the University's Winter term created a veritable furore, evoked loud hisses, and was greeted by frequent interruptions when, with grave prophetic foreboding, he warned his hearers that "We (Jews and Arabs) must find ways and means of living and working together culturally and economically, socially and politically . . . If the only way of establishing a Jewish National Home is upon the bayonets of some empire, our whole enterprise is not worth while, and it were better that the eternal people that has outlived many mighty empires should possess its soul in patience, planning and waiting to enter the promised land, not as Joshua, but bringing peace, culture, hard work, sacrifice, love and determination, and doing nothing that cannot be justified before the conscience of the world."

This rather idealistic utterance of the University's learned Chancellor has called forth a mighty storm of protest on every hand. A surging wave of hysterical antagonism has arisen against one of Zionism's erstwhile most spiritual and cultured leaders, going so far in some quarters as to demand his resignation from the University. The American Jewish Congress, through a special committee, has expressed its "sense of outrage" and has vehemently scored the "utter irresponsibility exhibited by one holding so high an office," and has urged that "action in relation to Palestine, especially at this time of crisis, should be taken only by duly constituted authorities."

The logic of this rejoinder cannot be challenged. But the need for such "duly constituted authorities" is posited solely on those nationalistic aspirations and political entanglements which Dr. Magnes would completely repudiate. When did the prophets of Israel bide their time patiently until the "duly constituted authorities" were consulted? Since when in Jewry has the freedom to express one's views on concrete situations been outlawed? Only since we have become so tragically and disastrously involved in diplomatic snares. Prompted by similar reasons, then is such language as: "to speak in terms of concession that are tantamount to surrender . . . to admit that terrorism, including massacre, pillage and rapine has availed to extort from Jews terms which would have been unthinkable, if these deeds of terrorism had not been wrought." Not that such phrases would not have been uttered by our fathers in the past. But formerly, at least, they would have been spoken to justify Israel's fealty to the very ideals to which Dr. Magnes would have the Jew still cleave. Yea, verily, deeds of terrorism never intimidated the Jew abjectly to surrender his principles; but his political ambitions,—that is quite another matter.

Nor do we feel that the New Palestine is warranted in designating Dr. Magnes as a "pacifist in panic," or to characterize his carefully weighed words as a "private political spree of his own," an "hysterical yielding to the importunations of rioters and murderers."

The very language employed by the New Palestine and by the resolution of the American Jewish Congress strikes us as much more hysterical and panicky than the wholly dispassionate imprecations of the Chancellor. In his first reply to the protest which his plea engendered, he quietly counsels "As far as I am concerned, I believe that intelligent discussion of all angles of the problem must precede whatever settlement may be reached later. . . My purpose is to set the Jewish public to thinking and agitate it to realize that it is impossible to continue as before, for it is my profound conviction that without this realization the Jewish public the world over is bound to suffer disappointment and disillusionment in its hopes with regard to the Jewish national homeland in Palestine." If this be "sheer irresponsibility," if this be "even arrogance," if this be a "plea of cowardice," if this be "misapplied pacifism likely to lead to a reign of terror," if this be "undignified, ill-considered, ill-timed and, above all, dangerous to the peace" of Palestine, then, in very truth, we join with the vast crowd that is demanding Dr. Magnes resignation, and we, too, epudiate him as a leader in Jewish life. But if this be plain, ordinary, common sense, with just a dash of that idealism of which the Jew in the past was never so ashamed, if this be prompted by a profound understanding of the cultural and spiritual phases of Zionism, by a fervent belief in the "cleansing, spiritualizing and enriching power of Palestine over the Jew and Judaism, and by a passionate longing that Zionism, cultural and ethical Zionism, "add a glorious chapter to the history of the eternal people . . . through genuine understanding, through educa-

Mrs. Sperber came here about 38 years ago from Austria, was the founder of the Hebrew Benevolent Society, a member of the Shaar Hashomayim and Bnai Jacob Synagogues and a Hebrew scholar. The late Mrs. Sperber is survived by her husband, David Sperber; two sons, Dr. Simon Sperber and Marcus M. Sperber, K.C.; and one daughter, Mrs. C. J. Gross, all of Montreal.

At the Woman's General Hospital, Tuesday, there died one of the oldest members of Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue, Mrs. A. S. Workman, aged 60. A native of Utica, N.Y., she came to Montreal some 40 years ago. Her husband pre-deceased her about 20 years ago and her sole surviving relative in the city is Miss Elsa W. Workman, a daughter. Funeral Wednesday from 35 Madison avenue, N.D.G., at 10.30 to Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue cemetery.

KREUTZBERG — GEORGI DANCE RECITAL

Martha Allan presents the World's Greatest Dancers, Harald Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi for one performance only, Sunday Night, December 1 at 9 o'clock at His Majesty's Theatre.

From N. Y. Evening World, Jan. 21, 1929. A magnificent dance recital was presented by Harald Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi, under the auspices of Elisabeth Marbury. Mr. Kreutzberg, who created a sensation here when he appeared with the Max Reinhardt company, won another triumph at this splendid exhibition of dancing at its peak of perfection, and his new partner rightly shared in the honors of the occasion.

Mr. Kreutzberg, more than any other of his ilk within memory, is blessed with precisely the right physique for a male dancer. Lithe and limsome, all the contours of his body express strength and grace, and the co-ordination of every line of limb and torso as he moves through any of his numbers is something rarely paralleled on the stage.

Only a profound study of the emotional significance of attitudes and a consummate knowledge of dance technique made possible the projection of such a completely finished bit of solo work as his "Dance of the Master of Ceremonies." This bit of Chinese grotesquerie, stemming from Reinhardt's festival play at Salzburg, would in itself have been sufficient to throw glamour over the proceedings.

More expressive hands than Mr. Kreutzberg's have still to be found, and his use of them has probably not been equalled since the days of Nijinsky. For brilliance, imagination, vivacity and proficiency, this was work of the first rank, and its unescapable fascination roused a large audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

THE origin and home life of Geo. Graham's groceries are all that they should be. In each case investigated, we've found the animal, vegetable, or mineral in question, happy, healthy, and ambitious. Ambitious to be up and doing. To see life. To enjoy the advantages of travel. Whereupon they come to Graham's and we are so pleased with them and with ourselves for finding them that we forget to be modest and frequently become rather objectionable, throwing out our chests and strutting around and refusing anchovies unless they have a Graham pedigree.

Y. M. H. A. LECTURE SERIES APPEALS TO YOUTH

The Y.M.H.A. lecture series is framed for the purpose of giving to the young men and women timely talks on subjects of day to day interest by people who know how to appeal to youth. The series will be opened by Henry Hurwitz, Chancellor of the Menorah Association of New York, Sunday evening, December 8th. He will speak on "Britishers, Arabs, and Jews," with a view to giving a dispassionate picture of the conflict of cultures and races in Palestine. In connection with this address the Library has made special purchases of books on the Jewish Arab Question, and on the mandate, and many members of the Association are preparing themselves for the talk by reading some of these books. Committee on lectures and concerts is headed by I. Diner, with whom are Dr. H. H. Pearson, Louis Gelfand, Louis Jason, M. O. Kirsch, S. L. Park, J. Eliesen, J. Rubin, Sid Morris, and Harold Neumann. Other lecturers for future visits include Louis Hurwich, of Boston; Dr. M. M. Kaplan, of New York; Maurice Hindus, authority on Russia; and Lobagola, the Oxford Negro. Harvey Golden is executive director of the Y.M.H.A.

You Don't Have to Handle it with Gloves to Get the Heat Out

Our coal is black, like all coal. And not only is it black but it leaves a smudge on your fingers unless you handle it with gloves. However, that is the only thing black about it. Inside, it has a heart of fire.

You handle it with gloves when you put it in the heating plant but you don't have to handle it with gloves to get the heat out. Without coaxing, it sends its glow of warmth throughout the entire house despite the coldest weather.

BIG MARKET LOSSES

Since the peak in the late bull movement was crossed last February, reactions in the Canadian stock market have chopped off the valuations of 62 Canadian common stocks a total of $2,310,109,560. The major portion of this immense sum is represented by the depletion of but 28 securities which aggregates $2,038,966,232, and what is more significant the initial reaction began only the first week in October, after a more or less uneventful summer. It may therefore be said that this amount was chopped off in but six weeks of trading, a record in the annals of Canadian stock market securities.

BRAZILIAN TRACTION

Net earnings of the Brazilian Traction, Light & Power Company for the month of October amounted to $2,392,450, an increase of $244,013 over the net for October of last year and constituting the twenty-fifth consecutive increase in monthly net over the corresponding month of the preceding year.

For the ten month period ending with October, net earnings amounted to $23,461,615, an increase of $2,875,934 over the net for the corresponding period of last year.

SHERWIN WILLIAMS

A slight increase in earnings and a continued improvement in balance sheet position is indicated in the annual report of Sherwin Williams Company of Canada, Limited, for the year ended August 31, 1929. Earnings for the year were equivalent to $2.65 per share on the new no par common stock of the company, or 3.27% on the old common stock, as against 13.30% shown on the old stock in the preceding year.

Earnings for the period under review are shown at $1,006,326 as compared with $1,000,197 in the preceding year and $31,304 in the fiscal year ended August 31st, 1927.

WINNIPEG ELECTRIC CO.

Settlement of the long-standing claim of the city against the Winnipeg Electric Co. for paving repairs has been reached by acceptance by the city of $125,000 in discharge of the debt.

After considerable discussion, the company has agreed to pay this sum. The city's original claim was $325,657, but auditors employed by the city advised that $157,659 would be an equitable adjustment. The company originally admitted a claim of $50,000. Later it offered $115,000, and has now agreed to pay $125,000.

HAMILTON BRIDGE

Hamilton Bridge continues to operate with a volume of business far in excess of any previous year. The company's biggest contract, the supply of half of the structural steel that is being used for the huge head office building of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Toronto, is just a little over half-finished so that on this

Reasons For Confidence Indicated In Industrial Outlook

AFTER the drastic scaling down in prices that has occurred the question often heard is "What about the outlook?" The answer is that, with few exceptions, the outlook and prospects of practically all Companies are just as promising as they were when the market was at its peak That there is every reason for confidence is shown by special reports that have been compiled in connection with various developments.

A story in connection with Montreal Power comes from a representative of a very large Chicago Public Utility group that came to Montreal and made a very exhaustive study of the entire power situation here, and the position enjoyed by Montreal Power as the chief distributing organization. The report compiled was a very comprehensive one. The principal investigator, when asked what conclusion he had reached as to the price he would put on Montreal Power stock, replied: The deductions of our report would place it at $850.00 a share".

An Investment Trust organization that had been making a study of the Brazilian Traction situation with a view of making a very substantial long term investment went not only into the actual earnings now being made but to the developments that are likely to occur in the way of increased power production. The conclusions they reached were that, in addition to the steady gain in telephone and general lighting business, Brazilian Traction would ultimately have control of two million horse power, and when it did its earnings would be so high that the stock would sell at least at $350.00 a share.

In connection with the development of the Frood Mine of the International Nickel Company, Lord Melchett points out that it is not only the richest mine in the world but even in history. With the 10,000 ton mill that the Nickel Company is building to handle the ore from the Frood Mine it is figured that it will handle 10,000 tons a day, and for many years to come the lowest price ore will be $50.00, with the expectation that the Company will make at least $40.00 a ton on it. This will mean additional earnings to the Nickel Company of over $40,000 a day. This alone, in addition to present operations, would bring $7.00 to $8.00 more a share on International Nickel stock, while many of the Engineers have figured that when all plans are developed earnings should be at least $15.00 a share.

Mining & Oil

NORANDA MINES

Word from Rouyn is to the effect that a new and important strike has been made at the Horne mine of Noranda. Only meagre details are available. Where penetrated the new ore is said to show a width of 125 feet although it is not known if this is true width. Location is unknown. The company will most likely be operating both smelter units before the end of the year.

HOLLINGER CONSOLIDATED

Dr. Gratton, who for the past several weeks has been making a geological study of the Hollinger, has practically completed his report, but his findings have not yet been submitted to the management. Noah Timmins reports an improvement in conditions at the property and is hopeful of this being presently reflected in earnings.

TECK HUGHES MINES

At the annual meeting of Teck Hughes held in Buffalo Mr. Johnston, speaking in the absence of C. L. Denison, president (who was unable to be present because of illness) reiterated the statement made by Mr. Denison in the annual report to the effect that the mine never looked better and that it was reasonable to look with the utmost assurance to these results continuing in the future. Mr. Johnston said "everything is going on as planned and we are highly gratified with results."

CENTRAL MANITOBA

For the year ending April 30 bullion to the value of $509,556 was produced by the mill at the Central Manitoba Mines, Ltd., according to the third annual statement presented to the shareholders by Arthur D. Miles, president here. The ore reserves at the end of the year mentioned were 110,417 tons of a gross value of $895,725, a reduction of 30,917 tons.

During the 12 months 52,659 tons of ore were milled of an average grade of $10.18 per ton, the report states. The extraction was 95 per cent.

CROWN DOMINION OIL

Crown Dominion Oil informed authoritatively that an extensive expansion programme has been laid down by Crown-Dominion Oil Company, Ltd. This includes the establishment of super-service stations in Central Ontario and in the Niagara Peninsula. Construction will be carried out immediately by this company which is Canadian distributor of Tydol gasoline and Veedol motor oils.

DOME MINES

Delay of Dome officials in announcing their intention of rebuilding their mill, is taken by some people to mean that the company will make arrangements with Hollinger or Paymaster to treat their ore. While there is a decided possibility of this happening, it must also be remembered that officials may be only holding off until they learn of the date of the new mill at the McIntyre. This new mill if successful would revolutionize the entire science of gold metallurgy and would render obsolete the present gold mills. It would be no use for Dome building a new mill and then having to scrap it for the new process.

BASE METALS CO.

Reports from the Coast are that the new mill of the Base Metals Mining Corp. went into operation last week. Following a gradual tuning-up, the mill will be treating at the rate of 350 tons of ore daily. Preliminary estimates of earnings run 90 cents to one dollar for the first year's operation.

ARNO MINES

Directors of the Arno Mines will meet some time this week to consider substantial extension to their development program, according to reliable word. The company is considering the development of their Cobeath, Nova Scotia, property in a large way.

contract several months work still remain.

Although no unusually large individual orders have been received within the last month or two the company is enjoying a considerable volume of contracts that have been received from the railways, industrial corporations, and mining companies, and this business is filling in very satisfactorily.

CANADIAN CAR

Some out-of-town orders were responsible for the better market for Canadian Car issues in the past week. Both the common and preferred stocks are on a dividend basis and on this account many people have been figuring they are considerably out of line with other securities. A good proportion of the buying recently came from New York and it is thought to be for account of interests who are close to the car and equipment industry. Recently there has been some accumulation of the preferred stock owing to the unusual return it gives at present levels, more especially for a security that is a first lien on the company's assets.

HIRAM WALKER—G. & W.

In reply to inquiries received concerning the intention to continue or to increase the dividend, President W. J. Hume, of Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts, Ltd. in addressing the annual general meeting at Walkerville told shareholders present that there was no reason to doubt the company's ability to maintain the present rate. Mr. Hume stated earnings continue to be entirely satisfactory and the regular dividend of 25 cents a share was declared payable December 16 to shareholders of record at the close of business November 30.

B. C. POWER CORPN

An increase of $29,994 is shown in the net income of the B. C. Electric Railway Company, operating subsidiary of the B. C. Power Corporation for the month of September, standing at $385,181. Subsidiary companies reporting are B. C. Electric Power, Vancouver Power Company, Western Power Company, Vancouver Island Power and Victoria Gas Company.

Aggregate gross earnings for three months are higher by $209,992, while net earnings for the three months show an increase of $103,991 at $1,135,632.

INTERNATIONAL UTILITIES

Further evidence that earnings continue at a high level in spite of the recent drastic decline on the markets is indicated by a preliminary report of International Utilities Corpn. for the 9 months ended September 30, 1929. Net earnings of the period available for class A dividends amounted to $760,712, equal to $4.03 on that stock against a yearly requirement of $3.50. Gross earnings also show a substantial improvement and the statement is based on the earnings of all subsidiaries presently earned regardless of the dates of acquisition.

TIP TOP TAILORS

Gross sales of Tip Top Tailors Limited for the first ten months of 1929 show a healthy expansion over the corresponding period of 1928. The total for the period from January 1, 1929, to October 31, is officially reported at $3,880,745 contrasted with $3,251,184 for the first ten months of 1928, an improvement of $629,561 or 19.36%.

The company is enjoying sound expansion in all departments and it is interesting to note that last week in the midst of the stock market disorders that the company received in Toronto orders for 300 more suits than in the same week of last year.

Bank of Montreal Makes Record Report for Past Fiscal Year

Total Assets At Highest Level Ever Reported—Now Stand at $965,336,997 — Strong Liquid Position Maintained — Large Additions to Capital and Rest.

The Bank of Montreal annual statement for the fiscal year to October 31st makes a notable showing. Total assets constitute a record in the long history of the Bank; Capital and Rest have been increased to new high levels, and even under the somewhat disturbed conditions there are satisfactory gains in deposits.

Owing to general conditions in business and the security markets, there have been much heavier calls on the sources of the bank, but the statement shows that it has been readily possible to take care of them and at the same time maintain the strong liquid position for which the bank is noted.

The statement makes its appearance at an opportune time and will be closely analyzed by all who are desirous of getting a thorough knowledge of the banking situation in Canada.

The general statement of assets and liabilities establishes a number of new records and is likely to prove one of the most satisfactory ever forwarded to shareholders. Total assets at $965,336,997 are at a record level. New high figures are also reported in both Capital and Rest. As a result of the recent stock issue, the paid-up capital has been increased to $35,948,540.50, while at the same time Rest has been brought up to $37,948,540.50, at which level it stands $2,000,000 in excess of the Capital. Of the large addition to Rest Account, a portion represents the premium on the new stock issue, while a further $1,000,000 has been added from profits.

Strong Liquid Position

Notwithstanding the gain in total assets, the larger demands of the business of the country, and the unusual conditions existing in the stock and security markets, the Bank has been able to comfortably maintain its usual strong liquid position. Of total assets of $965,336,997 liquid assets amount to $496,269,977, equal to 56.88% of liabilities to the public. Included in these are total cash holdings of $116,964,670, equivalent to 13.40% of total public liabilities. The cash holdings comprise gold and subsidiary coin, $42,811,390; Dominion Notes $58,153,280, and deposits in Central Gold Reserves $16,000,000. Of total liquid assets Dominion and Provincial Government securities have increased to $98,670,889, up from $79,704,087 at the end of the previous year; and Canadian municipal securities and British foreign and colonial public securities of $25,033,797 compared with $26,054,892.

In the call loan department, call loans in Canada are at practically the same level as a year ago, at $39,406,650, as against $39,147,086, while call loans in Great Britain and the United States are substantially lower at $115,506,017, down from $138,965,168. The larger volume of business being handled by the customers of the bank is reflected in the increase in current loans in Canada, these now standing at $370,082,134, as compared with $368,752,388 last year. A portion of this large increase is probably due to the prevailing wheat situation in Western Canada.

At the same time there is also a gain in loans to cities, towns and municipalities, these now being reported at $28,751,575, as against $22,416,665.

Bank premises at not more than cost, less amounts written off, are $14,500,000 up from $11,500,000. The increase is due to the policy of having all bank premises under the one heading, as intimated by the President at the last annual meeting. Previously, a portion had been covered by bonds of the Merchants Realty Company, and these bonds have now been retired.

Deposits in all departments show a substantial increase for the year, those not bearing interest standing at $178,284,089, as against $149,779,430, while deposits bearing interest are $594,049,161, compared with $571,685,581.

Profit and Loss Account

As was perhaps to be expected, with the larger resources and increased business demands, profits for the year are well above previous levels. Net profits, after deducting charges of maintenance and making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts, were $7,070,892, equal to 9.47% on the combined Capital, Rest and undivided profits. To the profit for the year were added balance of profit carried forward, of $713,788, and premiums on new stock, amounting to $6,631,840, bringing the total amount available up to $13,816,521. This was appropriated as follows: dividends and bonus $4,713,233; pro-ment $435,885 and reservation for vision for taxes Dominion Government bank premises $900,000. There was then credited to Rest Account $7,631,840, leaving a balance of profit and loss carried forward of $735,852.

The report will be submitted to shareholders at the annual meeting to be held on Monday, December 2nd.

The principal accounts show as follows: Total assets, $65,336,937; liquid assets, $496,269,977.; cash holdings, $116,964,670.; capital, $35,948,540.; rest, $37,948,540.; total deposits, $772,333,260.; call loans (Canada), $39,406,650.; call loans (Great Britain and United States), $115,506,017.; Government securities, $98,670,889.; bank premises, $14,500,000.

Objective $300,000 for Federation Drive

The campaign committee of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies has set $300,000 as the objective that must be achieved if the 15 constituent societies are to be enabled to carry on their work of caring for the orphans, the aged, the blind, and the poor of the Jewish community. During the past year, the responsibilities of the Federation have increased with the growth of Montreal. A new 100 bed sanitarium at Ste. Agathe where those affected with tuberculosis may be cared for, is nearing completion. A spacious new home for the aged on Esplanade Avenue facing Mount Royal was also opened during the year. In addition, there are 13 other constituent societies whose entire financing must come out of the money raised in the forthcoming campaign which will formally open, Sunday, December 1, and continue till December 8.

The organization has been complete for some time under the chairmanship of Clarence Michaels of the Business Men's Council. Samuel Bronfman is chairman of the publicity committee and also a district control chairman. The other district chairmen are: Michael Morris, Harry Rother, Leon H. Fischel, Issachar Greenberg, Phillip Meyerovitch, J. P. Levee, Lazarus, Phillips and Irving Riddell.

Wednesday, November 20, an organization meeting of the Business Men's Council of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies was held at the Montreal Old Peoples' and Sheltering Home, Esplanade avenue. Michael Hirsch spoke.

He said that a check-up of the lists of donors to the Jewish Hospital campaign showed an increase of 4,000 individual subscriptions over those previously collected in Federation drives. The work of the volunteers was outlined as a thorough canvass of these new subscribers to Jewish activities, collection of delinquent accounts, and further subscriptions from those in a position to increase their present pledges. Allan Bronfman, chairman of the executive committee, spoke.

Clarence Michaels, chairman of the Business Men's Council, outlined the plan of campaign, which embraced both and zone and trade division systems. Julius Rost was master of ceremonies during the entertainment programme.

JEWISH LITERARY AND HISTORICAL SOCIETY

A Hebrew poet, Dr. Saul Fchernichovsky, has translated into the ancient Biblical tongue Longfellow's "Evangeline," was among the information given in an address on "Modern Hebrew Literature" at the Jewish Literary and Historical Society's meeting Sunday at the Mount Royal Hotel. This poet has also rendered into Hebrew verse Homer's "Odyssey" and "Iliad," songs of Anacreon, Sophocles' "Oedipus Rex," Longfellow's "Hiawatha," Shakespeare's "Macbeth," Shelley, Burns, Gothe, Alfred de Musset, etc., besides the Finnish Saga of "Kalevala." He has written short stories, an Outline of Anatomy, and fifteen sonnets "To the Sun" in which the closing line of each commences the next and the opening lines of the fourteen sonnets form the fifteenth. Dr. Fchernichovsky, said H. Edelstein, president of the Society, who quoted from the Hebrew poet, was the youngest of the great triad of modern Hebrew poets—the others being Ch. N. Bialik and S. Schneur.

A programme was contributed by H. Slutsken, violinist, accompanied by Miss M. Herman, and Miss Mendelssohn, pianist. A vote of welcome to Sholem Asch Yiddish dramatist now visiting Montreal, was passed by the Society.

MONTREAL LEGION BECOMES BRANCH OF LEAGUE TO SETTLE PALESTINE

The Montreal Jewish Legion will be known now as a branch of the Hagdud Haivri League. It was decided to establish a permanent organization for settlement and colonization in Palestine at a convention of former Jewish legionaries who served with the British Expeditionary Force in Palestine during the Great War. Representatives of the local unit who were present at the convention received the assent of their members for assimilation with the international group at a special meeting held Sunday at the headquarters on St. Lawrence boulevard. Hon. W. Jacobs, K.C., was the speaker.

I. Sandow, president of the local body, outlined the purposes of the league.

The Jewish Agency will be notified of the aims of the organization and asked to provide in its budget for the establishment of at least one colony of one hundred Jewish legionaries annually. The league will request the British Government to grant the land promised to their members in an ordinance to the Egyptian Expeditionary Force in 1919 and ask that they shall be admitted into the country without the customary immigration certificates.

The league will propagate the need and encourage the establishment of every lawful form of Jewish defence in Palestine, including units manned by Jews as part of the garrison there. It will co-operate with all Jewish social forces interested in Palestine and come to some agreement with the Workers' Organization for preparing legionaries for colonization.

An active campaign will be started in every city with more than a hundred thousand population for the formation of branches of the league. These units will engage in fraternal, social and sport activities for the welfare of the members and foster the spirit of comradeship, co-operation and mutual helpfulness. The Montreal unit will be considered as the headquarters of the movement in Canada.

Rev. Abraham Joseph Signer spoke of the growth of the organization, D. Segal, vice-president, reviewed the past activities of the unit and expressed the belief that assimilation with the league would add impetus to the movement for the upbuilding of Palestine. B. Sindleman, treasurer, accounted for disbursements during the past year.

BRIDGE AIDS ORPHANS' HOME

A bridge and mah jongg party in aid of the Montefiore Hebrew Orphans Home, was given by the women of the Board of Directors of the Home, Wednesday, November 20th, at 2.30 p.m. About two hundred women were present. The raffle prize, consisting of two bronze statuettes donated by S. Talpis, was won by Mrs. J. Cress, 5462 Park Ave. The following were in charge: Mesdames N. Beecher, D. Cohen, M. Crelinstein, L. B. Daniels, Chas. Gordon Gibson, P. Gordon, Halperin, J. Jacobs, R. Kaminsky, K. Koopferstock, M. Lefeort, W. Lustgarten, S. Lerner, M. Rosovitch, B. Steinhouse, M. Schneiderman, H. Schafer, L. Weisberg, M. Woskoff.

Mrs. George Spirer, of New York, was the guest of Miss Irene Raport for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Kraimer, of Dayton, Ohio, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Abelson and Mr. and Mrs. I. Finn, while here for ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Marks, of Westmount, P.Q., spent the last week-end here.

N. Smith spent a couple of days here on his way home to Toronto after visiting with his daughter in Montreal for a few weeks.

Sam Berger will be a candidate for the Public School Board in the elections December 2nd. Mr. Berger lives in St. George ward, but in 1926 and 1927 he represented By ward on the school board.

The marriage was solemnized at the home of the bride's father, M. Raport, 65 Robert street, Saturday evening, November 15th, at half-past eight o'clock, of his eldest daughter, Edith, and Cecil Slonemsky, son of Mrs. I. Slonemsky and the late Mr. Slonemsky. Rev. Nathan Kellin officiated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by a sister, Miss Irene Raport, as bridesmaid. Harold Pearl was groomsman. Mrs. Sam Lepofsky, sister of the groom, played the Wedding music and Miss Sylvia Gould sang "All Love Be Thine". The rooms were adorned with palms, ferns and different coloured chrysanthemums. The bride's wedding gown was of ivory satin made on princess lines, the skirt made long in the back to form a train. The folds of her silk Brussels net veil were arranged on the head in Chapat cap style and adorned across the back with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of orchids, roses and lily-of-the-valley. The bridesmaid was in a gown of rosewood silk net made in bouffant style, and she carried an arm bouquet of Ophelia roses. Mrs. Slonemsky, mother of the groom, wore a black gown of chiffon and Chantilly lace with a cocktail jacket to match, and a shoulder bouquet of roses. A reception was held for the family and intimate friends. Among the guests from out-of-town were Mrs. Geo. F. Spirer, of New York; and Mr. and Mrs. R. Marks, of Montreal. The couple left on a trip to Chicago and will live in Ottawa. The bride travelled in a frock of black chiffon velvet made on princess lines, with a long back. The collar of Battenburg lace was caught with gold threads, and she wore a hat of black soleil felt, and a black carocul coat trimmed with black fox.

Mrs. R. Bessin held a tea at her home for Anna Goldfield Chapter of Hadassah. The hostess was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Benj. Goldfield. A number of folk songs were sung by Miss Bertha Lefkin. A silver basket of mums and tapers were used on the tea table which was presided over by Mesdames M. Greenberg, M. Finkelstein, A. Freedman, of Montreal, assisted by Misses R. Lefkin, Rose Greenberg, Mrs. T. Bessin, Misses Bella Bessin, J. Golden, E. Wolinsky, N. Bessin and J. Petegorsky. Money donations were received by Mrs. H. A. Rosdiman and Miss L. Petegorsky. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. S. Levy, of New York; Mrs. A. Freedman, of Montreal; and Mrs. L. Hymer, of Cornwall.

A meeting of the newly formed Deborah Chapter of Hadassah was held at the home of Miss Ray Cornblatt. Miss Reva Baker, president of the chapter, thanked the members for electing her. A paper was read by Miss Sarah Torontow. The hostess was assisted in serving tea by Misses Rose Cornblatt and Sadie Spevak. Miss Spevak won the door prize.

The local chapters of Hadassah held a bazaar November 19th and 20th. Following are the chapters in charge of the various booths and their conveners: Bertha Slonemsky in charge of candy, smokes and fortune telling, and the conveners were Mrs. B. Sanders, and Miss F. Carlofsky; the Lillian Freiman in charge of home cooking, Palestinian booth, flower booth, dolls and vanity, and the conveners were Mesdames D. Epstein, J. Rivers, H. Greenblatt, M. Pearlman and Ben Edelson; The Pauline Bilsky in charge of groceries, housey-housey, and stationery, and the conveners were Mesdames A. Glickman, A. Smith, H. Edelstein, F. H. Sinclair, A. Belman and A. Harris; towels, aprons and stockings in charge of the Anna Goldfield and conveners were Mrs. R. Bessin and Mrs. B. Goldfield; Naomi Jr. Chapter in charge of refreshments and convener, Miss Nettie Bessin; Lena Florence in charge of the fancy work and the conveners were Mrs. L. Finc and Mrs. H. Finkelestein.

Mollie Sachs Chapter of Hadassah held its monthly meeting at the home of Miss P. Pollack. Miss Olive Pullan presided. Miss Sara Millar, the treasurer, gave her report. Refreshments.

The third meeting of the Jewish Young People's League was held in the King Edward Avenue Synagogue Wednesday evening of last week with an attendance of over 300. Rabbi Nathan Kellin spoke on the difference between orthodox Judaism and rabbinical Judaism. The president, Dr. S. Mirsky, outlined plans for activities.

Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, may establish his residence in Jerusalem when the Council of the Jewish Agency is formed.

IRWIN N. ROLLMAN
Owner of Hotel Pennsylvania, St. Denis Street, Montreal.

The Pennsylvania Hotel is situated in the heart of the city on St. Denis Street, just below St. Catherine, filling a long felt need for a modern hotel in the east end of the city. Tourists delight in the quaint old-world surroundings, and find interest in the University of Montreal buildings which are but a stone's throw away. The location of the hotel is of interest, but the interior is of even greater charm. The rooms have been decorated very prettily in varied colors and many artistic effects, and have an air of comfort and luxury that is as welcome as it is rare in hotel rooms. Great care was given to the intimate details of the sleeping rooms so that guests really enjoy quiet and rest. Mattresses, springs and other appointments are of the finest to be had. The dining room meets with the approval of the most epicurean. The cuisine is of the finest and the service and table appointments excellent. The management will make arrangements for special dinners, banquets, teas, mah jonggs, bridges, receptions, whether for the individual or a club group. Mr. Irwin N. Rollman, the proprietor, or Mr. Louis Dombrecht will give careful supervision to such reservations. The out-of-town guest will enjoy a meal at the Hotel Pennsylvania. There is a seventy-five cent lunch and a dollar dinner—both very delicious. It has been said that a hotel is no better than its kitchen. The Pennsylvania Hotel is proud of the place where the meals that are making it famous are prepared. chen is spacious, well-ventilated and in keeping with the rest of this scientifically planned modern hotel.

The Kelvinator Electric Refrigeration, conceded the world over to be the best and most scientific system, is arranged as to give the maximum efficiency in the least space. For instance one room accommodates meats, another dairy produce, another fish, while still another is utilized for making ice cubes and frozen desserts.

The management has not overlooked any detail by which efficiency, cleanliness and the scientific preservation of foods might have been improved, and Kelvinator plays a most important part in designating this the most up-to-date kitchen in Montreal. In short, the refrigeration equipment represents but one of the ideals, towards which this enterprise is centered.

The grill is also designed on the most modern and recent developments in this field of public service. Beverages are cooled by the most sanitary method known, namely, Kelvinator-Bilt Rite.

The wine cellar too is pleasing to the connoiseur. The grill is making new friends each day for its good food and quick service are appreciated.

The lobby which is very beautifully furnished expresses the warm welcome extended by the Hotel Pennsylvania to its guests. Consult with the management on any social affair you are planning. The Hotel Pennsylvania will offer you charm, hospitality and service.

Students Hiss Head of Hebrew College

Dr. Judah L. Magnes, Chancellor of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, dwelt on the political and general situation in Palestine in an address November 18 upon convoking the winter semester of the University, before a large audience of leading Jews and students in the reading hall of the new library building.

Dr. Magnes deplored the recent disorders, declaring the government had broken down and that, had it not been for brave Jews, the massacre and pillage could scarcely have been confined to the Jewish communities. "How can we leave our houses without fear of being stabbed, or walk up the university hill without being shot from ambush?" asked Dr. Magnes commenting on the effect on of the situation upon the university's progress.

"If the Hadassah clinic containing valuable medical instruments was destroyed at Hebron, can this university, with its precious possessions, be immune from the plunderers' hands?" he asked. "We must find ways and means of living and working together culturally and economically, socially and politically and in every other way with the Arabs.

"If the only way of establishing a Jewish national home is upon the bayonets of some empire, our whole enterprise is not worth while and it were better that the eternal people that has outlived many mighty empires should possess its soul in patience, planning and waiting to enter the promised land, bringing peace, culture, hard work, sacrifice, love and determination and doing nothing that cannot be justified before the conscience of the world."

At this juncture Dr. Magnes was interrupted by M. Ussishkin, director of the Jewish National Fund, who disagreed with the views of the chancellor. The interruption was followed by the applause of several students agreeing with M. Ussishkin.

When reference again was made by Dr. Magnes to an understanding with the Arabs the same students hissed him, but they immediately were quieted by others in the audience. Dr. Magnes then continued:

"How hard it is made for us to speak in such terms when not only blood is shed in the most primitive of religious and nationalistic orgies but when one finds so little understanding on all sides of the sacred character of this Holy Land. There are those of us who yesterday were ready and eager to consider the whole problem of the relations of Jews and Arabs, including political problems, not only from the Jewish but also from the Arab and international point of view. Many of those now are frightened and ask: 'Can we consider such questions and make concessions as a reward for the methods employed at Hebron and Safed?'

"This question is but natural. Yet I say in this difficult and dangerous hour we must not be deterred even by massacre, or the corruption and intrigues of instigators of massacre, from facing a problem that undoubtedly exists, and from giving it as far as we can an objective, ethical, intelligent answer.

"We must face the problem, not because of pogroms, but despite them; not as a result of violence, but as an attempt to remove excuses for violence; not because of physical massacre from without, but because of spiritual pressure from within ourselves. Unless we have the courage to face it and the strength and wisdom to solve it, the sooner the better, our enterprise has not been put on the firm foundation necessary for its development."

Upon completion of the speech Dr. Magnes introduced Professor Fraenkel, formerly of the University of Kiel and recently appointed to a post at the Hebrew University, who delivered an instructive lecture on philosophy and mathematics.

Jewish Congress Scores Dr. Magnes

A statement repudiating the conduct and utterances of Dr. J. L. Magnes, chancellor of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, with regard to Jewish aspirations in Palestine, was issued by a special committee representing the administrative committee of the American Jewish Congress, a central body of Jewish organizations and communities in different parts of the country on November 21.

The committee to draft a reply to Dr. Magnes was appointed at a special meeting of the administrative committee, and comprised Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, honorary president of the congress; Bernard S. Deutsch, president of the congress; Nathan D. Perlman, Carl Sherman, Israel N. Thurman, Baruch Zuckerman and Bernard G. Richards, executive director.

The statement as issued by the American Jewish Congress follows:

"The administrative committee of the American Jewish Congress expresses its sense of outrage over the utterances of the chancellor of the Hebrew University which have come from Palestine. We deplore the utter irresponsibility which has been exhibited by one holding so high an office. We believe that action in relation to Palestine, especially at this time of crisis, should be taken only by the duly constituted authorities.

"The recent utterances in Palestine have broken what has, since the disaster of August and September, been the virtually unbroken front of the Jewish people, placing its confidence in the readiness and capability of the Agency to act in protection of our honor and in defense of our rights and of our labors in the rebuilding of Palestine.

"To speak in terms of concession that are tantamount to surrender, and at a time when the British Commission of Inquiry is sitting in judgment upon the recent events and their causes is, in substance, to admit that terrorism including massacre, pillage and rapine, has availed to extort from Jews terms which would have been unthinkable if those deeds of terrorization had not been wrought.

"We know that the time must come when Jews will meet again, as they have often met heretofore, with Arabs in order to confer upon problems of common interest. But we, as a people, cannot meet by our representatives with those self-styled leaders of the Arabs, who are responsible for the shedding of the blood of our people.

"We join in the deep feeling of the Jewish people throughout the world that nothing could be more destructive than to call, as the chancellor of the Hebrew University has called for, the relinquishment of the Balfour declaration. The Balfour declaration was accepted by us and by the world as a declaration of the resolve of Great Britain and of the nations of the world, to facilitate the establishment of a Jewish national home in Palestine. Though up to this time its terms have not been fully redeemed, we have confidence in the integrity of the British Government and of its ultimate purpose and ability fully to redeem its pledge to facilitate our endeavor to establish a Jewish national home in Palestine.

"That the Chancellor should call upon his fellow-Jews 'to renounce all ideas of political domination' and that he should repeatedly demand such renunciation of such domination, is to speak of something which he well knows does not exist and carries an implication which is bound to inflict the gravest possible hurt upon the Jewish people.

"We protest against the conduct of the Chancellor in making it appear that the Jews are opposed to the establishment of a Parliamentary Assembly in Palestine, when, in fact, it was the Jews who accepted the proposal of Sir Herbert Samuel, the High Commissioner of Palestine, for the establishment of such a Parliament, even as the Arabs rejected it. Whenever that Parliamentary Assembly comes into being, it must be under terms which are consonant with the purposes, explicit and implicit, of the Balfour declaration and of the mandate to the British Government from the League of Nations. A Parliamentary Assembly that would undo the Balfour declaration would become an instrument of tyranny which would defeat the just aspirations of the Jewish people and the purposes of the British Government which have been sanctioned and confirmed by the civilized world.

"Most of all we deplore the misleading impression created by the utterance of the Chancellor that there is an irreconcilable conflict between a Jewish national home in Palestine and an international Holy Land for Jew, Christian and Moslem. Surely he must know that no such antithesis exists. We Jews, of all peoples most desire that in addition to Palestine becoming a Jewish national home, it shall always be an international Holy Land where in the religious rights of Jew, Christian and Moslem shall alike be held sacred by men of all faiths.

"Finally, we believe that a most grievous wrong has been done to the Jewish people and without Palestine insofar as it has been summoned by the chancellor to do justice to and to make peace with the Arab, as if the Jewish rebuilders of Palestine had been bringers of war and doers of injustice to the Arabs.

The Balfour declaration has resulted in the emancipation of the Arab serfs of Palestine. The resettlement of Palestine has brought a new economic, educational and social level of life to the Arab people.

"To call upon the Jews of Palestine to be peaceable in relation to the Arabs is to ignore and obscure the fact that the Jews have done everything that a people could do in order to establish peaceable relations with the Arabs. The Jewish resettlement of Palestine has not only brought health and well-being to the Arab, but has found Jews prepared to do everything in order to establish a just and lasting peace with their Arab neighbors.

Condemnation of Dr. Magnes' negotiations with the Arabs, looking to the establishment of a Parliament in Palestine, and of his negotiations with St. John Philby, anti-Zionist, is made in The New Palestine, official organ of the Zionist Organization of America.

The editorial, reflecting the opinion of the Zionist organization, contends that the negotiations are dangerous to the peace of the country and are likely to lead to further bloodshed of the kind which occurred in Palestine recently.

Referring to Dr. Magnes as a well-meaning pacifist who has permitted his pacifism to run away with his better political judgment, the editorial says, "It is seldom that action proposed by a man in a panic achieves its purpose," and adds that

Dr. Magnes "has never demonstrated more clearly than now the futility of pacifism as a policy of panic."

The editorial says in part:

"At the annual opening exercises of the Hebrew University, Dr. Magnes declared, "Palestine can never be a Jewish national home. It will always be an international home for Jews, Christians and Arabs alike."

"This statement is the public climax of recent activities that Dr. Magnes has undertaken - without public authority or request - as the obvious result of the riots in Palestine. These activities included among other things negotiations with St. John Philby, notorious anti-Zionist and general meddler in the Near East, who has drawn up an extraordinary 'constitution' for Palestine - a constitution which speaks gently to the Jews and places unlimited power in the hands of the Arabs.

"It is almost incredible that a time like this an intelligent Jew should go off on a private political spree of his own. Now, if ever, it is our duty to concentrate all moral and political authority in the properly elected bodies the Vaad Leumi in Palestine, in the Zionist Executive outside of Palestine. And precisely at this moment Dr. Magnes rushes off to the agent of Ibn Saud to tell him how he Dr. Magnes—is willing to give up on behalf of the Jewish people, which he has not consulted on this point, in order to insure the good will of the Arabs and peace between the Arab and the Jew."

Asserting that Dr. Magnes's action was irresponsible and even arrogant, the editorial says that it has "no intelligible relation to pacifism," continuing:

"We honor the pacifist principles of Dr. Magnes, but we cannot see how the cause of peace (or decency) is served by a hysterical yielding to the importunities of rioters and murderers. Does Dr. Magnes imagine that he imbues the Arab leaders (more accurately the mob leaders) with a sense of peace and responsibility when, as the fruit of their blood-thirsty lawlessness he makes offers and concessions? Does he suppose that the instigators of the riots will accept his proposals as anything other than the helpless plea of cowardice and terror? The first principle of order, of civilized human behavior, is to grant nothing under a threat of violence, for such a grant merely increases the appetite of the bully."

Pointing out that Sir John Chancellor had cancelled conversations with his home government for an Arab Parliament, because of the brutal and inhuman behavior of the Arab leaders, the editorial maintains that Dr. Magnes's action is "undignified, ill-timed and, above all, dangerous to the peace of the country."

Pointing out that the Jews want peace but that the Arabs do not, The Day criticizes Dr. Magnes for taking up matters not in his province.

"Who does not want peace with the Arabs?" The Day asks editorially. "This propaganda among the Jews for peace creates the erroneous impression that the Jews do not want peace, that they must first be persuaded to desire it; in reality it is just the other way round. There is nobody to talk to about peace. The Arabs do not want peace.

"Since the British Shalom Society began its activities years ago, there has not been one Arab paper to speak in the same strain as the British Shalom propagandists. There has not been one political Arab group to stretch out its hands in order to make peace with the people of the British Shalom by whom they were addressed—these good, decent people of the British Shalom who forgive all and are ready to renounce all. They are prepared to give in to the Arabs everything they demand and what they do not demand. If the Arabs want a Parliament well. Parliament they can have; if the Arabs do not want the Balfour Declaration—well, down with the declaration.

"But even this is of no help. The Arabs want to make peace only with those Jews who have both their feet outside the frontiers of Palestine; but peace with the Jewish settlers in Palestine this they desire neither to hear of nor see.

"Let the men of the British Shalom speak in their own name! If, however, instead of speaking they should begin to act, if they should make, or attempt to make, Zionist policy on their own responsibility or irresponsibility, if they should approach those in power with their advice or their plans which are contrary to the opinions and plans recognized by Zionism that would mean taking the power into their own hands, that would mean division among the Jews. Instead of creating order it would mean establishing anarchy and this may not be tolerated."

The American veterans of the Jewish Legion, a Jewish army corps that fought with Lord Allenby in the conquest of the Holy Land during the World War, have sent a telegram to Dr. Magnes demanding his resignation and terming his actions as treasonable to the most sacred Jewish ideals.

The telegram said:

"A general meeting of ex-Legionnaires held in New York yesterday condemns your tactless, unauthorized meddling in Palestine affairs. We consider your dangerous propaganda of surrender as treason to the most sacred Jewish ideals during the entire exile. Your stand endangers the existence of the university. We demand your resignation. Your place is not in Palestine."

YOUNG PEOPLES' SOCIETIES

Affiliated with many Synagogues are organizations known as "The Young Peoples". These have for their aims the furthering of the spiritual, educational and social life of the Jewish youth. However, we examine the results of the "Young Peoples" in the category of the spiritual and educational—we find that same are meagre. For the most part, the "young set" spend their energies arranging "dances"—of course, under the auspices of the Synagogue. The success of the Young Peoples is also judged by the number "attracted" to these dances. Now it is the easiest thing in the world to gather the young even under the roof of a synagogue —for dancing "refreshments" and a general good time. But it does seem a pity that Jewish youth identified with the Synagogue should not be able to lift a higher standard of life—a life that will speak in the terms of Jewish culture and Jewish idealogy. The Synagogue is in need of its youth—not a dancing youth, but rather a "thinking" youth. Let the "Young Peoples" have smaller meetings from the point of view of numbers—but let it have bigger Jewish aims and objectives.

THE COURAGE OF DR. MAGNES

There are few in Israel like unto Judah Magnes, head of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. One who is acquainted with his career knows full well—that Magnes is fearless and prophetic. When he has a truth to convey, he does it even though it may spell tremendous personal sacrifices. This is the story of Magnes as Reform Rabbi and social reformer. It is also true of Magnes as dean of the University. Magnes at the opening of a new scholastic year, spoke of the present trying conditions in Palestine. As head of this institution, devoted to scientific research, he had a right to proclaim that the University seeks peace between Jew and Arab; that science knows no barriers of race or creed. Whatever the Chancellor pronounced was in place and in accordance with the dignity of his high office. It is certainly to be regretted that that friend, Ussishkin, raised such a disturbance during the delivery of Dr. Magnes' address. All the protests on the part of "Nationalists" will not silence the prophetic utterances of a Magnes. Jewish extremists may sneer at what Magnes said—but it is the truth nevertheless. And the pronouncements of truth are not regulated by fixed seasons. Truth comes at any time. When it does come, it speaks most eloquently. When Isaiah thundered forth "put not your trust in Egypt, in chariots because they are many, and in horsemen because they are strong"—he was criticized. So is Magnes rebuked because he wants a Jewish Palestine built not through force and the overshadowing might of British arms. Jews must seek a cultural centre in Eretz Yisroel, through righteousness, gentleness and peace.

"THE V'AD HA-IR"

Montreal has a Jewish community Council known as the V'Ad Ha-Ir. We hear of its existence about once a year—when it stages its annual fight against some meat shops which no longer care to be under the supervision of the Council of Orthodox Rabbis—which organization works hand in hand with the V'Ad.

In the Council's recent proclamation against a certain owner of a meat shop, published in the press, there is the following phrase: "As the institution which represents the whole Montreal Jewry, etc." Now, the V'Ad does not represent the entire Jewish community of Montreal. Far from it! There are wings in local Jewry that would more than resent being classed under the leadership of the existing community council. This, however, is a minor factor. The question that is put to us by a reader is just this—what is the function of the V'Ad? What has it done in the cause of Jewish Education and general Jewish community life? Is the V'Ad merely a vigilance committee over Jewish meat shops?

When the Jewish Charities drive was about to be launched in Chicago, Rabbi Felix Mendelsohn, writing in the Sentinel, said: "It is incomprehensible that people who have enough money for belonging to expensive social and golf clubs should evade their duty to the charities. Many of these people will present as an excuse for not belonging to the charities the contention that they are 'doing plenty' for poor relations and indigent families. While this liberality is praiseworthy it does not excuse one from contributing to the only central and recognized charities of Jewish Chicago." Jewish communities are much the same the country over. What applies to one generally applies to all especially with regard to membership in the central Jewish charities organization. It is to be hoped that the Federation campaign of Montreal which opens December 1 will be able to surmount all difficulties in the way of meeting its budget.

Giving to Federation is the one item which does not call for thrift!

From the Nation, November 27: "Things seem to be getting worse rather than better in the Near East. The Arab-Jewish riots have died down, but the bitterness persists, and expresses itself in ways which may, in the long run, be even more dangerous than a sudden murder or riot. No Jew buys goods of an Arab, and no Arab buys of a Jew. Arab pickets stand about the streets; if an Arab merchant sells to a Jew, his windows are smashed and his goods spoiled; if an Arab is seen buying of a Jew he is beaten up, and, according to the custom of the East, even his family may be made to suffer. This boycott cuts even the dormant roots of Jewish-Arab good-will; there had seemed to be reason to hope that the relative prosperity which Jewish capital brought to Palestine might ultimately change the Arab attitude. Nor has the British inquiry yet developed any rays of hope. Impartial it may be—both Jews and Arabs are attacking it—but there is need for more than neutrality. To the Arab mind the British are the protectors of an alien and aggressive race; to the Jews the British have violated their pledges of protection. Perhaps a permanent solution can come only if and when Zionist leaders, ceasing to depend upon the fragile word of a political government, work out a method of dealing directly with the Arabs. That is a faint hope today."

The Jewish spotlight focuses on Dr. Judah L. Magnes, president of the Hebrew University in Palestine, as he colors life for millions of his co-religionists by urging them to renounce all ideas of political domination in the Holy Land. By proposing that the Zionist executive in Jerusalem and the Vaad Leumi, the Palestine Jewish Council, appoint a commission to study the problem of Arab-Jewish relations, and the establishment of a Parliament, he causes men to see black or red and to suffer loss of voice and nearly succumb with apoplexy. He advises the creation of a cultural centre as the only dream of Zionism and opposition to him in Palestine and abroad at once grows violent. Dr. Magnes emphasizes the establishment in Palestine of an international home for Jew, Christian and Moslem and his co-religionists are thrown into a fever. He expresses disapproval with Jewish retention of rights in the Holy Land secured by bayonets in face of antagonism from the majority of the inhabitants. He wants the Jews to wait with the upbuilding of Palestine until this can be undertaken in accord with the Arabs. So now they are all out to get him.

For an hour when Dr. Magnes pleaded before the Vaad Leumi for an agreement to be concluded with Arab national leaders and for the introduction of a Parliament there was great excitement and heated debate and many members left the meeting in protest. When Dr. Magnes set forth his views at the Hebrew University he was hissed. In this country the Jewish press, the American veterans of the Jewish Legion, the American Jewish Congress and others are calling him names and hurling charges. It is all appropriately keyed up and fittingly violent expressed in burning language and seering figures of speech. He is called a tactless, unauthorized meddler, a traitor, a well-meaning pacifist, a foolish yielder to the importunities of the Arabs on threat of more trouble, a man of utter irresponsibility with regard to present problems.

Now Dr. Magnes is a rationalist. To many dogmatic, emotional Zionists he must appear as an oddity, therefore. They see this as a time when Jewry should present a united front. A united front to them means an insistence on the terms of the Balfour Declaration and Great Britain's pledges under the Mandate. They have glorified and idealized the Balfour Declaration. When Dr. Magnes calls it a handicap they judge him to be either erratic or arrogant. But breath does give out and the vocabulary of denunciation is exhaustible after all. Meantime Dr. Magnes has caused a stir. He has provided a topic rich in discussion, argument and desperation and all groups in Jewry owe him a vote of thanks. He may lose his position as a result of his views. But in the light of his public expression of them no Jew can honestly complain that nothing ever happens.

RABBI STERN WILL HELP IN CAMPAIGN OF REFORM JUDAISM

Rabbi Harry J. Stern, of Temple Emanu-El, will be one of the campaign speakers in Plattsburg, N.Y., on December 8 for the Union of American Hebrew Congregations during its annual interchange of lecturers, rabbis and laymen between cities in Canada and the United States. Approximately 300 members visit more than 200 cities during the tour which had for its purpose the strengthening of progressive (Reform) Judaism in America.

Rabbi Stern said that its first project was the establishment and support of the Hebrew Union College for the Jewish teaching profession. From small beginnings in 1875, he added, it has become one of the outstanding religious institutions in the world. It occupies four large buildings, and includes fifteen distinguished scholars on the staff. Since its foundation, 289 rabbis, many of whom occupy some of the foremost pulpits in America, Canada and England, were ordained. The library and museum possesses one of the largest and most important collections of Jewish works in the world, comprising 85,000 volumes, 2,000 Hebrew manuscripts, 2,200 paintings, and 2,000 ceremonial objects gathered from every part of the world. It also has a rare collection of Jewish music, numbering, 6,000 items.

As time passed by, their activities branched out and embraced the Department of Synagogue and School Extensions which aimed at stimulating the creation of new Jewish units such as congregations, religious schools, and study circles. The development of new literature and methods of religious education were also undertaken by this department. Two regional rabbis are attached to the staff, but on special occasions, such as the present lecture tour, the work of spiritual journeying on behalf of "Reform Judaism" is done by voluntary workers, including lecturers, rabbis and laymen. During the past year, 140 speakers made 1,406 visits, conducted services in 296 places, and arranged four teachers' conventions which were attended by 380 teachers.

The department plays an important part in the life of every Jewish community in which it is established. Through a commission on Jewish education, composed of rabbis, it devises curricula and produces literature for the elementary department, for Jewish high schools, as well as for adults and university students.

Twenty-eight thousand tracts on subjects of Jewish interest were sent to college professors, editors, judges, legislators and a large number of non-Jewish ministers. Intelligent news stories about the Jewish holidays were sent to daily newspapers in Canada and the United States, and an annual volume of services published for congregations without rabbis.

The Sisterhoods, affiliated with the union, are a federation of Jewish women's societies connected with congregations which stimulate women to acquire Jewish knowledge, and to engage in religious work. From 49 societies in 1913, the federation has grown to 344 societies with a total individual membership of over 55,000.

The Brotherhood Federation aims to interest Jewish laymen in active personal service on behalf of the synagogue. Its principal activities include the promotion of attendance at religious services, important survey of Jewish interest, and the fostering of adult study. Organized in 1923, it already comprises 120 Brotherhoods with an individual membership of 21,500. David A. Brown, New York banker, widely known for his leadership in relief and religious causes, is national chairman of the tour. Dr. Joseph Silverman, of New York, and Isidor Goldstrom will be the principal speakers at the special meeting to be held at Temple Emanu-El December 20.

Would you drink milk for Health?

Health is priceless. . . it cannot be valued in money. Yet if many people would spend just a few more cents a day for milk they would enjoy better health. A grown-up person should drink at least a pint a day; a child should drink at least a quart.

So many brilliant doctors recommend this simple rule. It surely should be worth a trial.

What milk!

The Rise of David Levinsky

A Novel by Abraham Cahan

By arrangement with HARPER and BROTHERS, Copyright.

"Ah, he won't join my Antomir Society!" I would storm and fume and writhe inwardly. "That's a tacit protest against the whole society as an organization of 'slaves.' It means that the society makes meek, obedient servants of my employees and helps me fleece them. As if they did not earn in my shop more than they would anywhere else! As if they could all get steady work outside by place? And what about the loans and all sorts of other favors they get from me? If they worked for their own fathers they could not be treated better than they are treated here." I felt outraged.

I rebuked myself for making much ado about nothing. Indeed, this was a growing weakness with me. Some trifle unworthy of consideration would get on my nerves and bother me like a grain of sand in the eye. Was I getting old? But, no, I felt in the prime of life, full of vigor, and more active and more alive to the passions than a youth.

Whenever I chanced to be on the floor where Blitt worked I would avoid looking in his direction. His presence irritated me. "How ridiculous," I often thought. "One would imagine he's my conscience and that's why I want to get rid of him." As a consequence, I dared not send him away, and, as a consequence of this, he irritated me more than ever.

Finally, one afternoon, acting on the spur of the moment, I called his foreman to me and told him to discharge him.

A committee of the union called on me. I refused to deal with them. The upshot was a strike—not merely for the return of Blitt to my employment, but also for higher wages and the recognition of the union. The organization was not strong, and only a small number of my men were members of it, but when these went out all the others followed their contagious example, the members of my Antomir Society not excepted.

The police gave me ample protection, and there were thousands of cloakmakers who remained outside the union, so that I soon had all the "hands" I wanted; but the conflict caused me all sorts of other mortifications. For one thing, it gave me no end of hostile publicity. The socialist Yiddish daily, which had an overwhelmingly wide circulation now, printed reports of meetings at which I had been hissed and hooted. I was accused of bribing corrupt politicians who were supposed to help me suppress the strike by means of police clubs. I was charged with bringing disgrace upon Jewish people.

The thought of Tevkin reading these reports and of Anna hearing of them hurt me cruelly. I could see Moissey reveling in the hisses with which my name was greeted. And Elsie? Did she take part in some of the demonstrations against me? Were she and Anna collecting funds for my striking employees?

The reports in the American papers also were inclined to favor the strikers. Public opinion was against me. What galled me worse than all, perhaps, was the sympathy shown for the strikers by some German-Jewish financiers and philanthropists, men whose acquaintance it was the height of my ambition to cultivate. All of which only served to pour oil into the flames of my hatred for the union.

Bender implored me to settle the strike.

"The union doesn't amount to a row of pins," he urged. "A week or two after we settle, things will get back to their old state."

"Where's your backbone, Bender?" I exploded. "If you had your way, those fellows would run the whole business. You have no sense of dignity. And yet you were born in America."

I was always accompanied by a detective.

One of the strikers was in my pay. Every morning at a fixed hour he would call at a certain hotel, where he reported the doings of the organization to Bender and myself. One of the things I thus learned was that the union was hard up and constantly exacting loans from Gussie and several other members who had savings-bank accounts. One day, however, when the secretary appealed to her for a further loan with which to pay fines for arrested pickets and assist some of the neediest strikers, she flew into a passion. "What do you want of me, murderers that you are?" she cried, bursting into tears. "Haven't I done enough? Have you no hearts?"

A minute or two later she yielded.

"Bleed me, bleed me, cruel people that you are!" she said, pointing at her heart, as she started toward her savings bank.

I was moved. When my spy had departed I paced the floor for some minutes. Then, pausing, I smilingly declared to Bender my determination to ask the union for a committee. He was overjoyed and shook my hand solemnly.

One of my bookkeepers was to communicate with the strike committee in the afternoon. Two hours before the time set for their meeting I saw in one of the afternoon papers, an interview with the president of the union. His statements were so unjust to me, I thought, and so bitter, that the fighting blood was again up in my veins.

But the image of Gussie giving her hard-earned money to help the strikers haunted me. The next morning I went to Atlantic City for a few days, letting Bender "do as he pleased." The strike was compromised, the men obtaining a partial concession of their demands and Blitt waiving his claim to his former job.

CHAPTER VI

My business continued to grow. My consumption of raw material reached gigantic dimensions, so much so that at times, when I liked a pattern, I would buy up the entire output and sell some of it to smaller manufacturers at a profit.

Gradually I abandoned the higher grades of goods, developing my whole business along the lines of popular prices. There are two cloak-and-suit houses that make a specialty of costly garments. These enjoy high reputations for taste and are the real arbiters of fashion in this country, one of the two being known in the trade as Little Paris; but the combined volume of business of both these firms is much smaller than mine.

My deals with one mill alone—the largest in the country and the one whose head had come to my rescue when my affairs were on the brink of a precipice—now exceeded a million dollars at a single purchase to be delivered in seven months. The mills often sell me at a figure considerably lower than the general market price. They do so first, because of the enormous quantities I buy, and, second, because of the "boost" a fabric receives from the very fact of being handled by my house. One day, for instance, I said to the president of a certain mill: "I like this cloth of yours. I feel like making a big thing of it, provided you can let me have an inside figure." We came to terms, and I gave him an advance order for nine thousand pieces. When smaller manufacturers and department-store buyers heard that I had bought an immense quantity of that pattern its success was practically established. As a consequence, the mill was in a position to raise the price of the cloth to others, so that it amply made up for the low figure at which it had sold the goods to me.

Judged by the market price of the raw material, my profit on a garment did not exceed fifty cents. But I paid for the raw material seventy-five cents less than the market price, so that my total profit was one dollar and twenty-five cents. Still, there have been instances when I lost seventy-five thousand dollars in one month because goods fell in price or because a certain style failed to move and I had to sell it below cost to get it out of the way. To be sure, cheaper goods are less likely to be affected by the caprices of style than higher grades, which is one of several reasons why I prefer to produce garments of popular prices.

I do not employ my entire capital in my cloak business, half of it, or more, being invested in "quick assets." Should I need more ready cash than I have, I could procure it at a lower rate than what those assets bring me. I can get half a million dollars, from two banks, without rising from my desk—by merely calling those banks up on the telephone. For this I pay, say, three and a half or four per cent., for I am a desirable customer at the banks; and, as my quick assets bring me an average of five per cent., I make at least one per cent. on the money.

Another way of making my money breed money is by early payments to the mills. Not only can I do without their credit, but I can afford to pay them six months in advance. This gives me an "anticipation" allowance at the rate of six per cent. per annum, while money costs me at the banks three or four per cent. per annum.

All this is good sport.

"One of five will suit you"

Every housewife has a family wash problem peculiar to her own home. In order to meet these requirements we have five different kinds of family wash service, each one taking the family wash one step nearer to completion, and each priced accordingly. In this way, you may have as much or as little help with your washing as you require and make it keep within reach of your housekeeping budget. Phone-to-day and let our young lady explain things to you, or stop any one of our courteous drivers.

United Cigar Stores Limited

Appreciate the patronage of all their Jewish customers.

I own considerable stock in the very mills with which I do business, which has a certain moral effect on their relations with my house. For a similar purpose I am a shareholder in the large mail-order houses that buy cloaks and suits of me. I hold shares of some department stores also, but of late I have grown somewhat shy of this kind of investment, the future of a department store being as uncertain as the future of the neighborhood in which it is located. Mail-order houses, on the other hand, have the whole country before them, and their overwhelming growth during past years was one of the conspicuous phenomena in the business life of the nation. I love to watch their operations spread over the map, and I love to watch the growth of American cities, the shifting of their shopping centers, the consequent vicissitudes, the decline of some houses, the rise of others. American Jews of German origin are playing a foremost part in the retail business of the country, large or small, and our people, Russian and Galician Jews, also are making themselves felt in it, being, in many cases, in partnership with Gentiles or with their own coreligionists of German descent. The king of the great mail-order business, a man with an annual income of many millions, is the son of a Polish Jew. He is one of the two richest Jews in America, having built up his vast fortune in ten or fifteen years. As I have said before, I know hundreds, if not thousands, of merchants, Jews and Gentiles, throughout this country and Canada, so I like to keep track of their careers.

This, too, is good sport.

Of course, it is essential to study the business map in the interests of my own establishment, but I find intellectual excitement in it as well, and, after all, I am essentially an intellectual man, I think.

There are retailers in various sections of the country whom I have helped financially—former buyers, for example, who went into business on their own hook with my assistance. This is good business, for while these merchants must be left free to buy in the open market, they naturally give my house precedence. But here again I must say in fairness to myself that business interest is not the only motive that induces me to do them these favors. Indeed, in some cases I do it without even expecting to get my money back. It gives me moral satisfaction, for which money is no measure of value.

CHAPTER VII

Am I happy?

There are moments when I am overwhelmed by a sense of my success and ease. I become aware that thousands of things which had formerly been forbidden fruit to me are at my command now. I distinctly recall that crushing sense of being debarred from everything, and then I felt as though the whole world were mine. One day I passed in front of an old East Side restaurant that I had often passed in my days of need and despair. The feeling of desolation and envy with which I used to peek in its windows came back to me. It gave me pangs of solidity for my past and a thrilling sense of my present power. The prices that had once been prohibitive seemed so wretchedly low now. On another occasion I came across a Canal Street merchant of whom I used to buy goods for my push-cart. I said to myself: "There was a time when I used to implore this man for ten dollars' worth of goods, when I regarded him as all-powerful and feared him. Now he would be happy to shake hands with me."

I recalled other people whom I used to fear and before whom I used to humiliate myself because of my poverty. I thought of the time when I had already entered the cloak business, but was struggling and squirming and constantly racking my brains for some way of raising a hundred dollars, when I would cringe with a certain East Side banker and vainly beg him to extend a small note of mine, and come away in a sickening satte of despair.

At this moment, as these memories were filing by me, I felt as though now there were nobody in the world who could inspire me with awe or render me a service.

And yet in all such instances I feel a peculiar yearning for the very days when the doors of that restaurant were closed to me and when the Canal Street merchant was a magnate of commerce in my estimation. Somehow, encounters of this kind leave me dejected. The gloomiest past is dearer than the brightest present. In my case there seems to be a special reason for feeling this way. My sense of triumph is coupled with a brooding sense of emptiness and insignificance, of my lack of anything like a great, deep interest.

I am lonely. Amid the pandemonium of my six hundred sewing-machines and the jingle of gold which they pour into my lap I feel the deadly silence of solitude.

I spend at least one evening a week at the Benders'. I am fond of their children and I feel pleasantly at home at their house. I am a frequent caller at the Nodelmans', and enjoy their hospitality even more than that of the Benders. I go to the opera, to the theaters, and to concerts, and never alone. There are merry suppers, and some orgies in which I take part, but when I go home I suffer a gnawing aftermath of loneliness and desolation.

I have a fine summer house, with servants, automobiles, and horses. I share it with the Bender family and we often have visitors from the city, but, no matter how large and gay the crowd may be, the country makes me sad.

I know bachelors who are thoroughly reconciled to their solitude and even enjoy it. I am not.

No, I am not happy.

In the city I occupy a luxurious suite of rooms in a high-class hotel and keep an excellent chauffeur and valet. I give myself every comfort that money can buy. But there is one thing which I crave and which money cannot buy—happiness.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming, and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

Health Service

WHAT DOES YOUR DOCTOR KNOW?

When an individual decides to become a doctor, he or she faces a long course of preparation. The principal requirement is education in subjects embracing the sciences upon which much of medicine is based. Because of the rapid development of all science during the past years, and in order to improve the training of those to whom human life is to be entrusted, the period of training has been considerably lengthened. When the medical graduate is given a licence to practice, he or she is qualified to render certain definite services because of the knowledge acquired.

Your doctor knows the structure of the human body and how it functions when it is normal or in a state of health. Those who think of their doctor as one to call when there is illness in the home, forget that he knows about the well person. It is because of his knowledge of the normal body, and how it can be kept normal, that he is able to provide a service to humanity in keeping people well. It is for this reason that the periodic health examination of apparently well persons by the family physician is of great value. It is through such examinations that the doctor is able to give to his health clients the benefits of what he knows concerning the maintenance of health and the prevention of disease, consequently, the securing of more years of health.

Your doctor knows the early signs or symptoms of disease just as he knows what occurs in acute disease. He knows how to treat disease early in order to prevent the development of more serious conditions. He knows what the man or woman with weakened organs should and should not do. He knows all this, but unless he is given the chance to use his knowledge in the early stages of disease, he cannot help you.

Because of what your doctor knows, you should make full use of his knowledge to help you in keeping well, in the early care of illness as much, if not more, as in its serious consequences.

tion, and through a system of economic, social and political co-operation," then must we bend every rational and intelligent faculty which we possess to a consideration of Dr. Magnes' suggestions for the solution of this most difficult and delicate problem.

Jewish nationalists will of course differ from Dr. Magnes' conclusions, and rightly so, for according to their view point, to quote the New Palestine again, "the first principle of civilized behaviour is to grant nothing under the threat of violence." They are therefore justified in rejecting Dr. Magnes as a spokesman of the Jewish nation. But Jewish religionists, even Zionists, followers of Achad Ha Am's dreams of a cultural and ethical impetus to be reborn in Palestine, must pay heed to his word of warning. They need not accept his message as "Torah Min Ha Shomayim", as infallible truth, but it is imperative that they discuss intelligently and calmly every angle of the problem. A crisis in the cause of Zionism has come; which aspect will achieve the victory only the future will tell, but rational and dispassionate discussion is now demanded. Tolerance for every suggested solution is imperative. Dr. Magnes has issued a grave challenge. It is exigent and vital that we consider it sanely and without passion. Consistent with certain interpretations of Judaism, he is hopelessly wrong, but then again, according to the view of others, few though they may sometimes be, he is unimpeachably right.

David Levinsky

Many a pretty girl is setting her cap at me, but I know that it is only my dollars they want to marry. Nor do I care for any of them, while the woman to whom my heart is calling—Anna—is married to another man.

I dream of marrying some day. I dread to think of dying a lonely man.

Sometimes I have a spell of morbid amativeness and seem to be falling in love with woman after woman. There are periods when I can scarcely pass a woman in the street without scanning her face and figure. When I see the crowds returning from work in the cloak-and-waist district I often pause to watch the groups of girls as they walk apart from the men. Their keeping together, as if they formed a separate world full of its own interests and secrets, makes a peculiar appeal to me.

Once, in Florida, I thought I was falling in love, with a rich Jewish girl whose face had a bashful expression of a peculiar type. There are different sorts of bashfulness. This girl had the bashfulness of sin, as I put it to myself. She looked as if her mind harbored illicit thoughts which she was trying to conceal. Her blushes seemed to be full of sex and her eyes full of secrets. She was not a pretty girl at all, but her "guilty look" disturbed me as long as we were stopping in the same place.

But though all these ephemeral infatuations and interests I am in love with Anna.

From time to time I decide to make a "sensible" marriage and study this woman or that as a possible candidate, but so far nothing has come of it.

There was one woman whom I might have married if she had not been a Gentile—one of the very few who lived in the family hotel in which I had my apartments. At first I set her down for an adventuress seeking the acquaintance of rich Jews for some sinister purpose. But I was mistaken. She was a woman of high character. Moreover, she and her aged mother, with whom she lived, had settled in that hotel long before it came to be patronized by our people. She was a widow of over forty, with a good, intellectual face, well read in the better sense of the term, and no fool. Many of our people in the hotel danced attendance upon her because she was a Gentile woman, but all of them were really fond of her. The great point was that she seemed to have a sincere liking for our people. This and the peculiar way her shoulders would shake when she laughed was, in fact, what first drew me to her. We grew chummy and I spent many an hour in her company.

In my soliloquies I often speculated and theorized on the question of proposing to her. I saw clearly that it would be a mistake. It was not the faith of my fathers that was in the way. It was that medieval prejudice against our people which makes so many marriages between Jew and Gentile a failure. It frightened me.

One evening we sat chatting in the bright lobby of the hotel, discussing human nature, and she telling me something of the good novels she had read. After a brief pause I said:

"I enjoy these talks immensely. I don't think there is another person with whom I so love to talk of human beings."

She bowed with a smile that shone of something more than mere appreciation of the compliment. And then I uttered in the simplest possible accents:

"It's really a pity that there is the chasm of race between us. Otherwise I don't see why we couldn't be happy together."

I was in an adventurous mood and ready, even eager, to marry her. But her answer was a laugh, as if she took it for a joke; and, though I seemed to sense intimacy and encouragement on the brink of a fatal blunder, and I escaped before it was too late.

"But then," I hastened to add, "real happiness in a case like this is perhaps not the rule, but the exception. That chasm continues to yawn throughout the couple's married life, I suppose."

"That's an interesting point of view," she said, a non-committal smile on her lips.

She tactfully forebore to take up the discussion, and I soon dropped the subject. We remained friends.

It was this woman who got me interested in good, modern fiction. The books she selected for me interested me greatly. Then it was that the remarks I had heard from Moissey Tevkin came to my mind. They were illuminating.

Most of the people at my hotel are German-American Jews. I know other Jews of this class. I contribute to their charity institutions. Though an atheist, I belong to one of their synagogues. Nor can I plead the special feeling which had partly accounted for my visits at the synagogue of the Sons of Antomir while I was engaged to Kapin that laugh, it gave me pause. I felt lan's daughter. I am a member of that synagogue chiefly because it is a fashionable synagogue. I often convict myself of currying favor with the German Jews. But then German-American Jews curry favor with Portuguese-American Jews, just as we all carry favor with Gentiles and as American Gentiles curry favor with the aristocracy of Europe.

I often long for a heart-to-heart talk with some of the people of my birthplace. I have tried to revive my old friendships with some of them, but they are mostly poor and my prosperity stands between us in many ways.

Sometimes when I am alone in my beautiful apartments, brooding over these things and nursing my loneliness, I say to myself:

"There are cases when success is a tragedy."

There are moments when I regret my whole career, when my very success seems to be a mistake.

I think that I was born for a life of intellectual interest. I was certainly brought up for one. The day when that accident turned my mind from college to business seems to be the most unfortunate day in my life. I think that I should be much happier as a scientist or writer, perhaps. I should then be in my natural element, and if I were doomed to loneliness I should have comforts to which I am now a stranger. That's the way I feel every time I pass the abandoned old building of the City College.

The business world contains plenty of successful men who have no brains. Why, then, should I ascribe my triumph to special ability? I should probably have made a much better college professor than a cloak-manufacturer, and should probably be a happier man, too. I know people who have made much more money than I and whom I consider my inferiors in every respect.

Many of our immigrants have distinguished themselves in science, music, or art, and these I envy far more than I do a billionaire. As an example of the successes achieved by Russian Jews in America in the last quarter of a century it is often pointed out that the man who has built the greatest skyscrapers in the country, including the Woolworth Building, is a Russian Jew who came here a penniless boy. I cannot boast such distinction, but then I have helped build up one of the great industries of the United States, and this also is something to be proud of. But I should readily change places with the Russian Jew, a former Talmud student like myself, who is the greatest physiologist in the New World, or with the Russian Jew who holds the foremost place among American song-writers and whose soulful compositions are sung in almost every English-speaking house in the world. I love music to madness. I yearn for the world of great singers, violinists, pianists. Several of the greatest of them are of my race and country, and I have met them, but all my acquaintance with them has brought me is a sense of being looked down upon as a money-bag striving to play the Maecenas. I had a similar experience with a sculptor, also one of our immigrants, an East Side boy who had met with sensational success in Paris and London. I had him make my bust. His demeanor toward me was all that could have been desired. We even cracked Yiddish jokes together and he hummed bits of synagogue music over his work, but I never left his studio without feeling cheap and wretched.

When I think of these things, when I am in this sort of mood, I pity myself for a victim of circumstances.

At the height of my business success I feel that if I had my life to live over again I should never think of a business career.

I don't seem to be able to get accustomed to my luxurious life. I am always more or less conscious of my good clothes, of the high quality of my office furniture, of the power I wield over the men in my pay. As I have said in another connection, I still have a lurking fear of restaurant waiters.

I can never forget the days of my misery. I cannot escape from my old self. My past and my present do not comport well. David, the poor lad swinging over a Talmud volume at the Preacher's Synagogue, seems to have more in common with my inner identity than David Levinsky, the well-known cloak-manufacturer.

THE END

Aime' Palliere's "The Unknown Sanctuary"

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman,

of Temple Israel, St. Louis, Mo.

The religious career of Aime Palliere stands out as one of the unique religious experiences in an era when novelty has abounded in the religious life. "The Unknown Sanctuary", the title of Palliere's book wherein he explains his religious evolution, is the sanctuary of Israel, unknown to the world, too often seen as depicted in medieval art as a withered hag, with eyes blindfolded and a broken staff in her hand, seen even in this fashion by the artist Sargeant in his frieze of the prophets on the walls of the Public Library of Boston. Because Palliere, too, conceived of the synagogue as a withered hag in his youth, because she was a stranger to him, and because in the years of his spiritual growth, he saw the beauty and the power inherent in her, he calls the synagogue The Unknown Sanctuary. And though he stoutly maintains that the blinded woman representing the synagogue is incorrect from the point of view of the medievalist, it is correct when it symbolizes the modern Jew who is according to Palliere blinded to the spiritual treasures of his heritage and who is so occupied in making a material place for himself in the world that the synagogue for him has become an unknown sanctuary.

What are the forces that have been at work that have taken a pious child from a pious observant home—a child attached to his home and considerate of his surviving mother; what was it that brought him from the church of his fathers to the Unknown Sanctuary of Israel—led him to become a Rabbi, a leader in the world movement for Jewish Youth, and an active worker in the cause of Palestinian reconstruction.

The Unknown Sanctuary is Palliere's confession. It mirrors his soul struggles, his wanderings from the church of his birth of the salvation army, then back from the excitement and turmoil of the army to the peace of the well-known cathedral—and finally to the Unknown Sanctuary, the synagogue, where his spirit found rest.

As a child, Palliere was interested in an illustrated bible. Across the embossed pages, his eyes loved to roam. Particularly fascinated was he by the Old Testament pictures, by the Hebraic Patriarchs, majestic, earnest, spiritual pioneers, leaving the sanctuaries of their fathers and building nobler edifices for their own souls. And the prophets of Israel, those idol breakers, those haters of sham and hypocrisy, those clear definers of the spiritual fundamentals of religion, those builders of the synagogue immortal, caught the imagination of the sensitive child. But the Doree Bible was too bulky and it was sold to make room for other things. The boy, Palliere, as he grew up developed marked religious tendencies and resolved to enter the priesthood. But so spiritually minded was he, that when friends or relatives lauded his choice of vocations because of its material advantages, he was tempted to alter his course, because his interest was spiritual. Up till the age of seventeen he accepted without question the religion of his environment and his determination to devote his life to the venerable faith of his parents was unruffled.

But then occurred one of those events which was to upset his resolutions. An occurrence not planned by anyone, but which was to have momentous effect on this life of this sensitive boy. On the Day of Atonement as he was passing the synagogue at Lyons, just as the Neilah Prayer was being chanted, one of the most solemn of prayers, when God is believed to be closing the gates of mercy and the soul of the individual, timorous and hopeful, makes its last plea for divine forgiveness, Palliere obeyed an impulse from the unknown to enter the synagogue. He saw the solemnity, the deep earnestness of the worshippers, the spotless white of their gowns. Because he was so sensitive religiously, he caught the majesty of that moment, and felt the religious pulse of an ancient people. He left the synagogue a devout Catholic. But he was slightly changed. Something had happened to him, which was to colour his later life. He had believed that Israel was dead—that Judaism had perished with its conceiving of the Christian Savior. He had been taught that the religion of the Old Testament was a withered branch, and its people society's spiritual scavengers. But he left that synagogue with a dent in the religious arbor of his youth.
